Bidders 'Encouraging'

West School Plans Win Green Light

Final plans for the 24-room West school addition were formally approved by the school committee Tuesday night as contractors continue to obtain specifications for the project.

The addition will be the prime topic at the October 7 special town meeting. Total project cost, according to architect Frank Crimp, is to be $2,243,000 or in the vicinity of $35 per square foot.

James J. St. Germain, chairman of the building committee told the school board Tuesday that as of that date, there were five general contractors who had obtained specifications in order to submit bids by the Sept. 19 deadline. He considered the total, "encouraging," and added that sub bidders were also in the numbers which would appear favorable to the town.

Two of the major, or general, contractors were not immediately certain of whether they would submit proposals or not at this time, the chairman said.

The building will be 63,475 square feet which will be added directly to the 26,000-plus square footage of the present building on Beacon St.

The interior will be an open classroom type school, designed to accommodate the ungraded program being introduced into the system with the opening of the Bancroft school later this year.

Architect Crimp told the board of his meeting with other architects on the open classroom plan recently in New York City at a Ford Foundation workshop.

He said the plans for the West school were brought to the meeting and a general all day discussion of various layouts produced a particular favoritism for the proposed Andover school.

The one outstanding point in the plan, Crimp told the board, was a special area of open space which could be partitioned in order to provide room for youngsters not immediately adaptable to the open classroom principal.

Crimp said he hoped that the costs would be less than he currently figures, but noted rising construction costs as a pertinent factor.

He said construction could start almost immediately and that the facility would be completed in 500 calendar days, according to the contract, or ready for occupancy in September, 1970.

This is a year later than anticipated, but school officials are hopeful that with a green light from the voters in October, the project can be underway and ready for the proposed opening.

When the vote was taken, all but School Committeeman William A. Doherty approved. He said he was not in opposition to the committee or the architect or the plans. He said he felt now and has all along that the school should be built in another section of West Andover, thus his opposition.

The plans are due for another review Monday night when the Finance Committee, selectmen, Finance Committee, selectmen, planning board, school committee and building committee meet in joint session to present further facts concerning the proposed addition.

The building and school committees also discussed briefly placing the facts about the building and its need before the public well before the town meeting date.

A special committee will be set up early next week to look into possibly getting together a brochure. Also, members of both committees plan to make themselves available to PTA groups during this month in order to present the plans.

He's Surprising The Viet Cong

(A TOWNSMAN Newsfeature)

This may come as a surprise to the Viet Cong, but Capt. Charles C. Glazerman is very much alive.

The Cong listed the veteran of four years service with the U.S. Army as having been killed five times during his one year tour of duty in the Mekong Delta.

Capt. Glazerman has just completed a leave from completion of his tour in June and has now returned to Fort Leonard Wood in Missouri.

The son of Mrs. Samuel M. Glazerman, 20 Washington Park Dr., he will serve as a company commander at the Army training center.

In his Vietnam tour, Capt. Glazerman was assigned to an advisory group and as such felt he got to know the Vietnamese people better and was able to understand their problems.

Assigned mostly to the Mekong Delta, he described the area as "sticky, swampy and wet."

He went to language school in Vietnam and thus was able to speak freely with the natives. He feels that once the Vietnamese obtain the feeling of security for themselves then most of the problems will be solved. As matters stand now there is no secure feeling that their property or children will be safe.

The soldier sees the Viet Cong as "hurting," now and a definite turn in the complexion of the conflict. Evidence of their difficulty is seen in the recruiting of 12-year-olds to fight in the war.

There is also evidence of much more defection in the Viet Cong ranks, Capt. Glazerman says.

As for the American troops, he expressed a feeling of extreme pride in the young people being assigned to the Vietnam conflict. "We have some fine young men coming in there, well trained and their morale is high. They are something to be proud of and I am glad to see the type of young military men taking over," he states.

The young man took part in 85 combat operations and 35 helicopter missions during his year of service there.

For his efforts, he was awarded the Bronze Star, the Vietnam Cross of Gallantry, presented by officials of the Viet government, the air medal and the combat infantry badge.

A graduate of Andover schools, he received his degree from Norwich University. Prior tours of duty with the army have included a year in Korea and a year recruiting officer candidates in New England colleges.

There is little doubt that his thoughts are still with the men he left in Vietnam and thoughts of the war stricken area still are on his mind. But he is safely back in the states after performing his year of service - one marked with gallantry by the Vietnamese - and one marked five times by the Viet Cong as a casualty.

Geared Powders

Metal powders of nickel and iron are used to make strong, light and intricately shaped gears for small engines. The gears are formed by compression and heat.

Controlled Contraction

Nickel is the most important known element for developing alloys whose expansion and contraction due to temperature changes can be controlled. By adding varying amounts of nickel to iron, alloys can be produced to match the expansivity of a wide variety of other materials.

Hanging Out The 'Wash'

If you have visited the New England coast this summer, you must have noticed the cormorants hanging out their wings to dry.

Cormorants are the large "black geese" that perch on buoys, sit on rocky islands, stand on the larger poles of fish weirs or among the larger dead limbs of island trees.

Perhaps cormorants are the easiest coastal birds to identify. Certainly they can be recognized instantly when they are drying, for they stand spread-eagle - like the metal eagle that caps flagpoles.

Many water birds spread their wings for a few seconds and shake them vigorously to flip water drops from the feathers. Ducks, for instance, flap their wings frequently, and often go through the fanning motion while still afloat on the surface. But cormorants stand motionless with their wings spread for many minutes. Sometimes one wonders whether an individual cormorant really is a bird or if it might be a black ornament affixed to a buoy.

The cormorants that spread their wings in New England in summer are the double-crested cormorant. The double-crested migrate southward in autumn and the great cormorants, now nesting in the sub-Arctic, move here in winter.

Oddly, the spread-eagle stance is common to all cormorants, including the flightless cormorant of the Galapagos Islands which are almost without wings. The flightless cormorant spreads his rather ridiculous stubs of wings with the same dignity common to his large-winged cousins.

Cormorants make a living catching fish under water. Since most water birds - even those that spend less time under water than cormorants - are waterproof, ornithologists long have argued over the significance of the cormorant's patriotic stance. Some say that cormorants are poorly adapted to standing on firm objects and must spread their wings to maintain a balance. The theory does not explain why in a group of cormorants on a rocky ledge some spread their wings and others do not - since the balance problem must be shared by all.

Seldom disputed is the fact that cormorants do become water-soaked. However, it is a fact that fits rather poorly within the framework of evolutionary theory - supposedly adaptations fit a bird into an environment, and a bird with feathers like blotters ought not be chasing fish.

Recently, Dr. A.M. Rijke of the University of Cape Town, South Africa, spent some time studying the microstructure of feathers from cormorants and comparing these feathers with those of mallard ducks. He found that the structure of ducks' feathers tends to capture air and in effect hold a thin coating of air between feather fabric and the water, thus waterproofing the feather. In cormorant feathers the size and structure of the barbs, which make up the feather surface, are arranged differently than in duck feathers and fail to trap an envelope of air. Thus, the cormorant feather becomes wet.

The Year Of The Raccoon

If you live anywhere except in the heart of a city, you probably know that this has been an exceptionally productive summer for raccoons.

Since I neither grow a garden nor am I too fastidious about what happens around the garbage pail, I find this population explosion interesting.

There had been hints in early summer that something unusual was afoot among raccoons. A female raccoon — or I supposed it was a female from its smaller size — frequently appeared at the garbage can before dark. She showed considerable urgency about gathering food.

As often as I tried, I never succeeded in learning how she removed the lid from the container.

The garbage can was kept upright — most of the time, at least — by an iron pipe driven into the ground. Since it is a twenty-gallon can of considerable diameter, the only apparent means by which an animal the size of a raccoon could remove the lid would be by standing on the lid and lifting it by the handle. But, this involved the old proposition of lifting oneself by one's own bootstraps and obviously was impossible. I finally decided that she climbed the iron pipe and lifted the lid by its rim — despite the fact that the rim was pinched between the can and the pipe.

On several nights when I heard activity, I turned a large flashlight on the can. But, I had to open the screen door before aiming the flashlight. Since a raccoon has considerable sensitivity to the slightest noise, the click of the latch gave her warning. It meant that I had to shine the light up a nearby pine tree until I finally saw two lights shining back at me — the reflections in the raccoon's eyes.

One night in early August, I was exceptionally fast at opening the door and the flashlight beam struck quite a congregation of raccoons. The female stood by the can and arranged around her were six half-grown raccoons. Within seconds, all had disappeared into the nearby weeds.

Six half-grown young is quite a record for a raccoon mother. She has but six faucets in her dairy department. Raccoons seldom, if ever, have more than seven young and the total score usually starts out at fewer than six. That she had brought six to half-growth probably was a tribute to her motherly instincts and my indifference. Between us, we had made good use of garbage.

What starts out well for raccoons sometimes ends badly. The garbage can lid has been removed less frequently in recent days. At least two adult raccoons have been shot in the neighborhood since the night that my flashlight caught a whole family. Probably one of them was the mother of that brood. One of them was shot while pulling a chicken out of a coop. The other was rifling a garbage can.

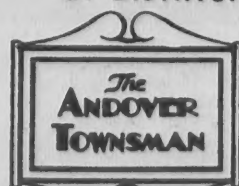

While one regrets to hear of the death of an acquaintance that ate from the same table — once removed — it is apparent from all the reports, plus actual sightings, of raccoons in the neighborhood that the current population explosion has produced a reliable supply. There must be far too many raccoons — so many that the grim, lean days of winter must thin them.

Native Corn

The large supplies of native corn on this week's market are announced by the Department of Agriculture.

This week's supply of native corn is a reasonable quantity and quantity received at the market appears to be crops in record.

While unimpaired some native vegetable supply include green carrots, celery, carole, cucumbers, tomato, romaine, California watermelons and squashes — yellow and zucchini.

There is a general lowering of prices in the market, but this year is an unusually sizable and native celery.

This recipe makes tasty vegetables:

Fry 1/4 lb. until browned.

Native Tomatoes, Corn Best Buys

The large harvest of native tomatoes and continued abundant supplies of native sweet corn make these two vegetables headliners on this week's "Best buys" announced by the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture.

This week will also find a good supply of early McIntosh and red Gravenstein apples on hand at reasonable prices. From the quality and quantity of native Macs being received at this early report, this appears to be one of the largest crops in recent years.

While unusual dryness has retarded some crops, a good list of native vegetables is on hand in excellent supply at low prices. These include green and Chinese cabbage, carrots, celery, chicory and escarole, cucumbers, eggplant, Boston, romain and salad bowl lettuce, California Wonder peppers, potatoes and a large variety of squashes - butternut, buttercup, yellow and zucchini.

There is good news for housewives on egg prices, with prices generally lower and medium eggs rating as the best buy in this department. Market reports indicate that this year's harvest of celery is an unusually good quality, sizable and reasonably priced considering the premium quality of our native celery.

This recipe for "Louisiana Tomatoes," made with eggplant, makes tasty use of these two native vegetables:

Fry 1/4 lb. diced salted pork until browned. Then add 2 tbsp.

olive oil, 1 chopped onion and a medium chopped green pepper. Fry until pork and vegetables are tender. Add to this 2 cups fresh tomatoes with a dash of cayenne and simmer about 30 minutes. Finally, add 1 pared diced eggplant weighing about 1 1/2 lbs. and cover and cook for 30 minutes. Serves 4 to 6.

Vacation Bible School Closes Annual Session

The Andover Bible Chapel was full to overflowing Thursday, Aug. 29 as parents and friends filled the chapel to standing room only capacity for the closing exercises of the fourth annual Daily Vacation Bible School.

The schools' director, Mrs. Richard Truax and director of Christian education, William Watson both expressed their appreciation for the fine cooperation of parents and the community generally in making this the most successful school session yet since the chapel opened its doors four years ago at 266 Lowell St., in Andover.

This year's school chalked up a new high in average daily attendance at 208 an increase of 39 pupils over the attendance of a year ago. The perfect attendance list is too long to publish, 138 in all, but each child received a special prize for their faithfulness. Parents were amazed at the eagerness of the children to attend and several told the staff of postponed or canceled family outings due to the children's desire to attend all sessions without fail.

Bible memory work is a central feature of the 10-day session and 83 scholars scored a perfect tally as they learned 9 scripture portions together with the correct references of where to find the portion.

Even the boys got in on the baby sitting course which was offered the older scholars. There were three boys and 29 girls who learned the babysitter's creed and completed the required study for graduation from the course which featured speakers from the Andover police and fire departments and nurses from the pediatric section of Lawrence General hospital.

The school achieved something of international status as Miss Katrin Weggemann, niece of Mrs. Grant of Andover attended the school. Katrin was spending a summer vacation here from her home in Germany and attended the school at the invitation of Miss Susan Shumsky.

Development of breakaway nickel stainless steel lightpoles, which shear at their base when struck by a car, promises increased highway safety. Extensive tests have shown that damage to a car, after collision, is minimal and the driver remains unhurt and in control of the automobile. The first major installation of such safety poles has been made by the Minnesota State Highway Department.

Red Cross Receives Donation

Mrs. Joseph J. Tavern, chairman of the Andover Red Cross Chapter, has received communication from Mr. Nelson Vogelsohn, Administrator of the Massachusetts Red Cross Blood Program, that an Andover resident has made a donation towards the "Building Fund" for the new Massachusetts Regional Blood Center. Mrs. Tavern, on behalf of the board of directors, expresses particular gratitude for this gift for the center which will be the core of the state-wide program, the processing laboratory for all blood, as well as a place for extensive research.

The letter is as follows:
 Gentlemen:

Enclosed is our check towards the building fund of the Massachusetts Red Cross Blood Program. I would like to have this classified as an anonymous donation in memory of Col. Frank Purdon and Mr. Fay Elliott, both of whom gave many hours of volunteer work to the Red Cross Blood Program in Andover.

Although this is a small gift in terms of the amount needed to complete the building project, it is given with the fervent hope that the total necessary funds are received in the very near future, and that the actual building will proceed expeditiously, so that the Red Cross Blood Program in Massachusetts can continue to grow in the service of the immediate needs of the area and the furtherance of research for the future.

Good Luck Students

As thousands of young people head back to school in the days and weeks ahead, we wish them success in their educational endeavors.

Diligence is necessary on the part of the many young people who will be attending classes from the smallest kindergarten pupil to the doctoral candidate.

America, more than ever before, is dependent on its young in these precocious times.

Education today is a necessity, if this country is to continue to move forward. The sophisticated forms of learning offered to the young today far differ from those of years ago. To the student, the daily classroom routine may seem a bore at times, but each minute has meaning.

These are the times for the student when preparation for future life is so important. In an age when times are in constant change, one must be aware of the different attitudes, varying approaches, and changing social climate.

In the course of study, a student will learn of the nation's history — a look at the past. He will also find that studying mathematics is not like it used to be and for good reason. If there is any doubt, ask a parent to assist with a modern math problem.

The modern student will be examining space science. His parents probably remember reading Buck Rogers comic strips which forecast this era, but at the time, realization of a man cavorting in space was considered absurd.

There is little doubt that as the nation's young progress, so will our country.

There is actual evidence, based on past experience, that educational advances have kept this nation in the forefront.

No doubt there will be campus demonstrations, etc. and probably various pranks.

At times these are acceptable, as the rambunctious youth let off steam, so to speak.

But let not these outbursts stand in the way of the formal pursuit of educational goals. There is too much at stake to let frivolity interfere.

America looks to its young for leadership in the years ahead. Nothing must prevent the fruition of that goal.

Good Teachers

The school department is to be congratulated in obtaining what appears to be a fine group of new teachers for the new school year.

During the past several months, administrators have been screening candidates to fill vacancies caused by resignations as well as filling posts for the soon to open Bancroft School.

Filling educational positions in this day and age is not an easy task. Teachers are in demand and can find rewarding positions wherever they so desire.

With the advent of collective bargaining, teacher groups, by whatever name they may be called, have made the hiring of new educational personnel in some systems quite difficult.

Here in Andover, the administration appears to have obtained several new teachers with exceptional talent. An examination of the past experience of the candidates elected this week, shows that the town's school system will be receiving some capable people.

This bodes well for the town's educational system. It also shows that the administration, with the approval of the school committee searched arduously to maintain the town's high level of educational opportunity for its young people.

It is also a credit to the Andover Education Association, which represents the teachers in collective bargaining sessions. A contract was signed Tuesday night noting agreement on a new contract between the school committee, representing the town, and the teachers.

The contract was difficult to come by, but long hours of negotiation between the town and the teachers has paid off. The agreeable settlement allowed the school processes to continue unblemished by unfortunate publicity which is accompanying teacher-town talks in other communities.

It is well for the professional educator to be recognized. He is a responsible, learned person whose endeavors must be rewarded as long as he continues to keep up with modern educational methods.

For this he is rewarded. His continued education does not go unrecognized.

Amicable agreement between administration and personnel only leads to a better school system.

This appears to be the case in Andover. Not only is the rate of transfers to other systems low, but the quality of those coming to the system remains high.

This week, two persons with credits approaching doctorate degrees were hired. Many of the new teachers have master's degrees. It is the aim of both the teachers group and the administration to have all professional personnel hold master's degrees by 1972.

This can only lead to a better school system and better education for the youth of this community.

Pipelines Proposed For Waste

Why use rivers to transport waste to the ocean?

Maybe there's a better method.

Waste pipelines to the ocean are proposed by Norman H. Brooks, Professor of Civil Engineering at the California Institute of Technology, Writing in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology magazine "Technology Review," Brooks says, "We should build long pipelines to take certain waste substances directly to the sea without depending on the rivers for dilution and transport . . . We should not necessarily assume that we are going to use fresh water rivers flows for dilution of waste, when the real problem is to get wastes to the ocean."

Brooks points out that we really have plenty of water for drinking and for industrial use; the problem is having enough water for both direct use and simply moving wastes to the ocean. Water which moves wastes to the ocean becomes unusable for home and factories, fishing and recreation in direct proportion to its use as a mere waste conveyor.

Waste treatment plants could concentrate the wastes, so that the pipelines would carry a relatively small volume and much of the water could be reclaimed for further use.

Brooks comments, "You may think it is not right to put all that waste into the ocean, but I remind you that you cannot make waste disappear; you have to put it somewhere. Do you want to burn it and put it into the atmosphere? Or perhaps we can spend more money and reclaim some elements for reuse. But you must make a choice."

Is this idea really practical? How could we keep the concentrated pollution away from the shores? What about pollution of the ocean? Even the ocean is not big enough to absorb any pollution we want to toss in; scientists believe pesticides are already affecting ocean life.

Could the nutrients from sewage wastes be used to feed offshore fish? Perhaps sewage wastes could be sent to the ocean by pipeline and dangerous chemical and industrial wastes could be reclaimed for reuse.

Ultimately, whatever man uses

Applications Processed

Close to 500 applications for the Vietnam bonus provided by state legislation, have been processed by Veterans Agent Elmer S. Ober.

Ober said that an additional 200 applications have been distributed by his office to out of town residents. Persons working for such firms as Raytheon, Internal Revenue, living outside of Andover have requested forms from the Veterans office, and they have been accommodated.

The bonus provides $300 for persons having served in Vietnam, and $200 for persons who have served during the crisis but outside of the combat area.

must be recycled, either by man's reclamation or nature's reclamation. If we overtax the ocean's reclamation system, it will spell disaster for mankind.

Oceanographer John Van Leer, who did a pollution study for the Nahant Conservation Commission points out the difficulty of getting pollution to go where you want it. "If you toss three bottles into the ocean at Nahant, one may end up in Marblehead, one may end up in England, and one may end up in Africa. There's a lot we don't know about currents. We'd better know more before we use the ocean for indiscriminate dumping. One thing you'd have to guard against is creating a sedimentation sink, if a natural ocean basin tended to catch the waste and fill up one part of the ocean with layers and layers of pollutants."

The pipeline idea is one that deserves serious study and consideration as a possible practical means of reducing river pollution. However, we'd better enlist the help of the oceanographers to make sure we don't solve one problem by creating two.

The idea is one that requires serious study and consideration of a possible practical solution to river pollution. We should better enlist the aid of photographers to make a record of the problem and solve one problem at a time.

The man who reflects before making a promise seldom has reason to reflect after breaking it.

One-half of the world doesn't know how the other half lives because one-half mind their own business.

Church Gives Photographs For Book

Faith Lutheran Church is among seven Lutheran congregations in the United States supplying illustrations for a newly published book.

John D. Murray, local photographer, took some 200 photos of a class of three-year-old church school children. From these, some 40 were selected for possible publication by Fortress Press. Eventually 20 were selected for inclusion in the book which is entitled "Children in God's Family."

Director for the project locally was Mrs. Emil C. Hervol. She was assisted by Mrs. Jack Burger and Mrs. Daniel A. Thoren. Some nine children participated.

In addition to taking the photos, the teachers supplied helpful comments and criticisms of the church school materials they were using. These comments were incorporated in the text of the book which is a teacher's guide. The three-year old material will be used for the first time in Lutheran congregations this fall. It attempts to relate basic truths of the Christian faith on a very simple level.

DON'T RUN OVER MY LITTLE GIRL!

"A few weeks ago I saw a little girl struck by a car as she tried to cross the street. I saw a father race toward her and hold her to him as she struggled in the agony of death. I saw the look of despair that came over his face. I could only offer a prayer that such a thing might never happen again.

"Today my daughter, who is six years old, started off to school. Her cocker spaniel, whose name is 'Scoot', watched her leave and whined his belief in the folly of education.

"Tonight we talked about school. She told me about the girl who sits in front of her, a girl with yellow curls, and about the boy across the aisle who makes faces; about the teacher who has eyes in the back of her head; about the trees in the school yard, and the big girl who does not believe in Santa Claus.

"We talked about a lot of things, some important, some unimportant.

"Now, as this is being written, she is sound asleep with her doll 'paddy' in her arms.

"When her doll gets broken, or her finger gets cut, or her head gets bumped I can fix them. But when she starts to cross the street, then Mr. & Mrs. Driver, she is in your hands.

"Much as I wish I could, it's not possible for me to be with her all the time. I have to work and pay for her home, her clothes and her education.

"So, Mr. & Mrs. Driver, please help me to look out for her. Please drive carefully. Please drive slowly past schools and at intersections. And please remember that sometimes children run from behind parked cars.

"Please don't run over my little girl."

Firearms Course Set For Minors

Norman R. Marble, supervising natural resource officer of the Division of Law Enforcement, Department of Natural Resources, announced today that a course for minors, ages 15 through 17, in the safe handling of firearms will be held at East Junior High School, beginning at 7 p.m. on Sept. 16. The course will be under the supervision of Natural Resource Officer Gordon Como and Andover Game Wardens Forrest H. Noyes, and James Deyerdmond.

Minors desiring to attend this course should obtain application forms in advance either from Irving Piper, at the Town Clerks office, or from the above named wardens, or from the Division of Law Enforcement, Government Center, 100 Cambridge St., Boston.

Auxiliary Schedule Fashion Show

A covered dish supper will be held at Briarcliff, Thursday, Sept. 12 at 7:30 p.m. Following supper, "Fall Fashions for 1968" will be shown on colored slides provided with tape commentaries. These are presented by North Shore Shopping Center. The evening offers a fine opportunity for present members to reacquaint after the summer and to welcome new faces.

Reservations are asked to be made no later than Sept. 10, with one of the following officers for this year Mrs. Thomas Torrisi, president; Mrs. Thomas Brennan, vice president; Mrs. Raymond Pageau, secretary or Mrs. Eugene Croke, treasurer.

Anyone who would like transportation to the hall can make such arrangements when calling for reservations.

There are more than 800,000 known species of ants.

Formal signing of contracts between the teachers and custodians with the school committee took place Tuesday night, culminating several months of negotiations between the three groups regarding wages and working conditions.

For the custodians it was the first formal agreement under the Collective Bargaining Act which mandates that a town must negotiate with a formally organized group. The agreement provided increased salaries as well as outlining conditions under which the custodial staff will work.

The teachers, represented by the Andover Education Association, came to agreement on their second such contract. It, too, provides for increased salary schedules and also improved working conditions.

For the professional staff, it means additional study to obtain salary increments and also pertinent work schedules for the professional educator - in some cases removing secretarial work from the every day schedule.

While the contract was approved by the entire school committee, it was Committee member Frederick P. Fitzgerald who did most of the negotiating and sat in on numerous bargaining sessions.

Dracut Firm Low Bidder

A Dracut firm was the low bidder on a road improvement project leading to the Lowell Junction Industrial Park.

George Brox, Inc., submitted a proposal of $147,422.95 for the work which will provide a connector road to the industrial park and also widen River St.

There were seven bids on the project.

Town Manager Richard J. Bowen has taken the bids under advisement prior to awarding the contract.

Funds for the work are provided in a bond issue which also allows the installation of water and sewer lines to the area where the Gillette Co. is building its new plant.

Junior Grid League Trials On Saturday

The Andover Junior Football League will start its ninth season this fall. The try-out dates for boys 10-13 will be held at the Andover Playstead, Saturday, Sept. 7 from 10 to 12 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. and Sunday, Sept. 8 from 1 to 3 p.m. Thirteen year old boys may not weigh over 120 pounds. Applications and medical forms are available today and tomorrow at all the elementary and junior high schools and also at Dana's Sport Shop and the Andover Police Station.

There will be four teams in the league - The Shawsheen Patriots will be coached by Jack Hammar, the Ballardvale Browns will be coached by John Popielarski, the West Andover Packers will be coached by George Hardman and Edward Seero will coach the Central Colts. Each team will play a six game schedule on Sunday afternoons.

The football season will open with the first game on Sunday, Sept. 29, at 1:30 p.m. at the Andover Playstead.

The president of the league for this year is William J. Igoe. Members of the board of directors are: Walter "Stretch" Pearson, Joseph Paulekas, Richard Collins, Phil Markey, Leo Keefe, Earl Thornton, Peter Houhoullis and Thornton, Peter Houhoullis and Mike Sweetzer.
